Welcome to Planet MIX! This year the MIX Factory occupies a different orbit, still in the East Village, our most frequent home, but a new space lovingly crafted to present experimental film art and a fun hang-out space to inhabit. The other day I was hit by the feeling that we’re so lucky to have what resources that we do to put on this festival, and do all the work that MIX presents year-round. Usually I feel that we don’t have enough time/money/people to realize all of our ambitions, but those disin-contents melted away into the love and satisfaction of being able to say “yes” as much as I can to artists and others who want to collaborate or are seeking help. That MIX has grown and thrives today is, if not miraculous then unlikely. I’m proud of these past decades, and MIX’s place in the hearts of many individuals and institutions worldwide.

Locally though, we urge you to take this week to OCCUPY BLEECKER STREET! The MIX Factory can be the site not just for just passively taking in films, but for actively reaching out to connect with other exciting queer life forms!

There is a utopian possibility in the current global occupation movement, in the imagination of science fiction (a theme that runs through this year’s design and programming, with Flaming Ears: A UFO Over My Bed, the installation Buck & Bucky and others) and in MIX! That potential is what we hope you experience when you give yourself over to this alternate universe. On the culture front, we are making over the world in a small venue for a week. On the popularly understood political front, Occupy Wall Street (mere steps from the MIX offices) is striving to make over the world at large. Precarious, precious, sustained by limited resources and human effort, let’s savor the sensation of possibility and change that can unite us on a multilateral undertaking.

I am immensely proud of the accomplishments that MIX has achieved artistically and institutionally (premiering Tarnation, the on-going ACT UP Oral History Project, expanded emphasis on installations & design, and our staunch support of free expression for artists & queerdos); and as we continue to push boundaries, it is equally important that we have a solid foundation in place to ensure that we honor this record of achievement, as well as provide a financial means for the vision of the festivals to come. That is the critical role of our donors, volunteers, board & staff, who have contributed immensely in ways large and small to secure the future of the festival. I encourage you to support MIX by donating your time or resources so our groundbreaking programming continues to flourish.

MIX is always a struggle, but a good one. There’s never enough money, and yet we seem to find a way, despite a year of rent increases, water leaks, rapacious landlords, and other quotidian matters. Let me close by quoting the renowned author Samuel Delany, whose thoughts fit perfectly with MIX’s dreams: “Science fiction isn’t just thinking about the world out there. It’s also thinking about how that world might be—a particularly important exercise for those who are oppressed, because if they’re going to change the world we live in, they—and all of us—have to be able to think about a world that works differently.” —Samuel Delany

MIX NYC is a 501(c)3 tax exempt non-profit arts organization incorporated in the State of New York. Contributions to MIX are welcome and fully tax-deductible to the extent permitted by law. MIX is supported in part with public funds from the New York State Council on the Arts (NYSCA), a state agency.
MIX NYC is thrilled to open our festival with a full program of films that defy conventional expectations in both content and form. The title of this program is a quote from David Wojnarowicz, and the featured film makers operate within a contemporary and exciting queer current of risk-taking and subversive art that contains his and many others’ legacies. Where ADILA, Disaster Movie and A Visual Guide to the Physical Examination provide stunningly beautiful images on film and are formally experimental in their manipulation of the medium, films like Frida and Anita and Looking for Jiro are more like thought experiments that challenge us to queerly re-imagine our past. Audrey Superhero and Veruca take different looks at the childhood origins of gender defiance. Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell GAY GAY GAY comically demonstrates how it feels to be the object of political debate, where How to Stop a Revolution takes up political challenges more subtly by mapping the deterioration of a relationship strained by the pressures of injustice. We conclude tonight’s screening and kick off this week’s festivities with Wildblood, a raucous animated zine!

LOOKING FOR JIRO
TINA TAKEMOTO
2011, USA, video, color, sound, 6 min.
Jiro Onuma arrived in the U.S. from Japan at the age of 19 in the 1920s and was imprisoned during WWII. Queer, and an avid collector of homoerotic physique magazines, the Jiro of this film is depicted surviving the isolation, boredom, humiliation and heteronormativity of internment. This musical mash-up video features drag king performance, U.S. propaganda footage, muscle building and homoerotic bread-making.

AUDREY SUPERHERO
AMY JENKINS
2010, USA, video, color, sound, 9 min.
“I wanted to be a boy when I got borned, you know, outta your tummy!”—Audrey, age 6.

Audrey Superhero explores the shifting terrain of gender identity. The film includes vividly charged discussions with Audrey, who insists that she is Superman, along with views of her obsessive role-playing during her daily life out in the “real” world. Playful and arresting, Audrey de-cloaks from Clark Kent to Superman, revealing her “secret identity” as a boy. She does push-ups, practices flying, and imagines “saving the police from the bad guy.” She ruminates, “to have a girlfriend I have to be a boy,” all the while drawing us into her state of transformation. The unscripted narrative was built through the collaboration of mother and daughter, with Audrey youthfully honest and willing to reveal her inner emotional state. She is open as only a six-year-old could be.

ADILA: A DAY IN LOS ANGELES
ETHAN EUNSON-CONN
2011, USA, super8mm, B&W, sound, 14 min.
In Los Angeles, art, like life, is something that happens between car rides. As seen through a rear-view mirror-like reflection of the mind, a hand-processed explosion of emulsion, light flares, and re-photographed images, a day shared between three artists creates a unique form of autobiographical fiction. As their conversation about a single relationship becomes a metaphor for the relationships between each of them and the relationship between an artist and their own artistic process. Adrift in a world of lousy, lost, or un-attainable loves, sometimes the only relationship we have that keeps us going is one we make ourselves.
HOW TO STOP A REVOLUTION
KENJI TOKAWA
2011, Canada, video, color, sound, 11 min.
A relationship breaks down under the strain of different oppressions that keep us silent even in our most intimate spaces. Oppression works divide-and-conquer style through struggles with race and class.

VERUCA
KATE HUH
2011, USA, video, color, sound, 5 min.
Dreamy macro shot stills of a fabulous queen create a landscape of genderfuck beauty. Voiceover of the filmmaker and Veruca talking about the shared histories of the evolution of their gender presentation. This is a film about friendship.

DISASTER MOVIE I, II, III
LORIN MURPHY
2011, USA, 16mm, color and B&W, sound on CD, 15 min.
D1: Disasters that happen to humans because of nature.
D2: Disasters that happen to nature because of humans.
D3: Disasters that happen to humans because of humans.
16mm film collage with hand-altered (painted, scratched, distressed) found footage and experimental processes shown on dual-projectors to create superimposed juxtapositions of nature footage, flooded towns, logging, smokestacks, crowded city sidewalks—not natural disasters as we might popularly imagine them but the disaster of life.

A DEATH IN THREE ACTS
NATHAN PANCIONE
2009, USA, video, color and B&W, sound, English/Spanish w/ English subtitles, 9 min.
A postcard has two sides. One, a recognizable image; the other, a personal message. A visceral journey, Death In Three Acts is a matador’s dance between two seemingly competing identities.

A VISUAL GUIDE TO PHYSICAL EXAMINATION
KELLY SPIVEY
2011, USA, 16mm, B&W, sound, 6 min.
This film is a contact printed experimental film. Spliced loops of picture and then optical sound have been printed onto new stock, hand-processed and solarized. A new kind of physical examination was formed.
DON'T ASK DON'T TELL GAY GAY GAY
DAYNA MCLEOD
2011, Canada, video, color, sound, 2 min.
Danya McLeod watches TV so we don’t have to. Like the short description summaries that often accompany TV programs through an on-screen cable guide, Don't Ask Don't Tell Gay Gay Gay is a jump-cut/short-cut edit of Season 4, Episode 4 of Boston Legal. All excess material has been removed to effectively capture the tone of national discourse around DADT.

ACTO PRIMERO, ESCENA CUAR TA
ELIÁS BROSOISE
2011, Mexico, video, B&W, sound, 8 min.
Staging of an excerpt from the opera Lakmé by Leo Delibes. Two women meet secretly where “the flowering vines spill their shadow over the sacred creek that runs quiet and dark, awakened only by bird songs.” A man stares at them . . . Their voices, floating on the water can be heard far away.

FRIDA AND ANITA
LIZ ROSENFELD
2010, Germany, video, color, sound, German with English subtitles, 20 min.
A glimpse into Weimar-era Berlin through an imagined one-night-stand between Frida Kahlo and Anita Berber in 1924. Sparks fly when two gender transgressing icons meet in a deliciously seedy nightclub. Revolutionary ideas and subversive art form the basis for a powerful attraction. This beautifully erotic film adds an anachronistic queer flavor to a favorite historical era.

WILDBLOOD
DAVID JONES
2009, USA, video, color, sound, 5 min.
Wildblood is the third piece in a trilogy of animated shorts by Los Angeles artist David Jones. It takes its inspiration from queer zines and the San Francisco homocore music scene of the early 90s. The artist was a member of the seminal band Fagbash and considers the piece reminiscent of the type of making indicative of this period. It is constructed entirely of xerox collages re-photographed and animated digitally.

THE PROJECTIONIST
Before the screening watch Jerry Tartaglia’s new film performance The Projectionist. Show starts at 7:30pm. See page 24 for details.

THE INSIDERS
Join us in the lounge around 10:30pm for Coral Short’s ambient performance. (p. 25)
Greetings, True Believers!
There has always been something a little weird about maintaining a secret identity... but secret identities have long been an ordinary part of life for two distinct yet similar sets of people: Queers and Super Heroes! From Bat Signals to Hanky Codes, those familiar with secret identities often devise a world, a language, or even an ethic of our own. Cartoonist Donald Simpson wrote an article describing Spider-Man as a metaphor for homosexuality, with Peter Parker’s secret life hidden from his live-in, frail aunt, who would not accept his difference. It was innocuous, but controversial at the time when gay representation in mainstream comics, the dominant medium for superheroes, was rare, and often homophobic, and certainly not nuanced. Short films in this program envision queer people becoming superheroes and superheroes becoming queer. Filmmakers plumb the depths of our uncanny relationship with the escapist fantasy of comic book heroes, but also the actual heroics of our everyday queer lives. Featuring both recent and older work, Secret Identities provides a plenitude of provocative politics, an abundance of action and adventure, and the dashing, dynamic Dyke Dollar.

CURATED BY THE FESTIVAL PROGRAMMING COMMITTEE.
TOTAL RUNNING TIME: 87 MIN.

SUPERDYKE
BARBARA HAMMER
1975, USA, 16mm, color, sound, 20 min.

A comedy about a troop of shield-bearing Amazons who take over city institutions before relaxing in the country. “Superdyke takes women into the streets when Barbara arms a platoon of vagina warriors with Amazon shields in an attempt to overthrow San Francisco. They march through City Hall, usurp the bus lines, demythologize the consumer mentality at Macy’s (to the recorded astonishment of casual shoppers), and wander through the erotic art museum. Barbara’s frenetic handheld lens catches the startled reactions and the glee of the participants. Superdyke has a home-movie quality to it, but its committed and loose moments in the playground confirm its comic rationale.” — P. Gregory Springer

AUDREY SUPERHERO
AMY JENKINS
2010, USA, video, color, sound, 9 min.

“I wanted to be a boy when I got borned, you know, outta your tummy!” Audrey, age 6.

An experimental documentary that explores the shifting terrain of gender identity. The film includes vividly charged discussions with Audrey, who insists that she is Super-

PONY GLASS
LEWIS KLAHR
1997, USA, 16mm, color, sound, 20 min.

Pony Glass is the story of comic book character Jimmy Olsen’s secret life. In this 15-minute cutout animation Superman’s pal embarks on his most adult adventure ever as he navigates the treacherous shoals of early ’60s romance trying to resolve a sexual identity crisis of epic proportions. A three-act melodrama—each act has its own song—filmed in Klahr’s signature collage style that “unmasks” our collective iconic inheritance as Americans while significantly expanding the notion of what a music video can do.
“Klahr cruises the elysian backstreets of childhood comic books to make a set of ‘musicals’ ripened by blue-eyed melos and soul-searching psychodrama. Cub reporter Jimmy Olsen proves to be a pony of a different stripe and a man of steel as he ascends beyond good and evil in this bittersweet bildungsroman.” — Mark McElhatten, New York Film Festival.

“In a different vein is Lewis Klahr’s Pony Glass . . . The central character of this cartoon collage, whose visual focus is in the 1950s, is Jimmy Olsen, the cub reporter from ‘Superman’, who is imagined in scenarios with musical accompaniment dealing with racial and sexual anxiety. The character is liberated from a repressed Milquetoast into a figure posed in various pornographic couplings. The synergy of intense pop music and cartoons makes for a disturbingly heady meditation on transgressive imagery and popular culture.” —Stephen Holden, The New York Times.

“Less fussy and far more transgressive than his previous work, Klahr’s collage animation Pony Glass makes comic-book hero Jimmy Olsen the locus of desperate anxieties about sexuality and race. The film is so charged with fear and desire that a simple iris down to black made the hair stand up on the back of my neck.” —Amy Taubin, The Village Voice.

TECHNOLOGY/TRANSFORMATION: WONDER WOMAN

DARA BIRNBBAUM

1978, USA, video, color, sound, 5 min.

A stutter-step progression of extended moments unmasks the technological miracle of Wonder Woman’s transformation, playing on the psychological transformation of a television product. Birnbaum considers this tape an “altered state [that] renders the viewer capable of re-examining those looks which on the surface seem so banal that even the super-natural transformation of a secretary into a ‘Wonder Woman’ is reduced to a burst of blinding light and a turn of the body—a child’s play of rhythmical devices inserted within the morose belligerence of the fodder that is our average television diet.”

SUPERHERO

EMILY BREER

1995, USA, 16mm, color, sound, 6 min.

Live-action, hand-drawn and computer graphic animation drive this high-speed fractured narrative about a Dionysian superhero who sometimes has to punch out Batman for being too goody-goody. Superhero is an updated personalized humorous response to our traditional cartoon hero story.

DYKE DOLLAR

LAURA TERRUSO

2009, USA, video, color, sound, 11 min.

An absurd, weirdo imagining of a rubber-stamped “dyke dollar” come to life, Dyke Dollar is a comedy about gay activism and identity politics as seen through the eyes of teenage boys in Suburban New York. Starring Lisa Haas as the Dyke Dollar herself.

WHAT IF?

DARRIN MARTIN & TORSTEN ZENAS BURNS

2009, USA/Korea, video, color, sound, 16 min.

A role-playing workshop where participants reenact a fictional polyamorous romance leads to a group wedding and honeymoon between characters based on two obscure Marvel superheroes and two internationally renowned art personalities. The happy foursome are Stelarc, an artist whose cybernetic mission in life is to render the body obsolete; Orlan, an artist whose actual redefinition of her own body via plastic surgery confronts representations of woman throughout art history; the Scarlet Witch, a mutant superhero who has unlimited powers over probability, and the Vision, a “synthezoid” whose mechanically fabricated body contains a human soul. What If? unfolds the entangled story that brought this romantic foursome together, spanning the gulf between genders and representations; the body and technology.
We live in exciting times. Every day, we observe more of the old ways pass and new ways come into being. This collection of short films captures change in progress, some dealing with the personal impact of vast power imbalances and some dealing with the possibilities for revolution. Is Money Money, La Entrevista and Vamos a Quemar come to us from queer collectives of politicized artists and scholars, or artistic political activists, as the case may be. These small groups are taking up critical issues at a critical time, and refusing to simplify the intersectionality of identities and experiences of oppression and revolution. Individual artists are also bringing us highly personal work dealing with issues of our wealth, our relationships, our bodies, our work and even DADT on television. CURATED BY THE FESTIVAL PROGRAMMING COMMITTEE. TOTAL RUNNING TIME: 108 MIN.

Is Money Money

B.J. Dini
2010, USA, video, color, sound, 9 min.

Inspired by The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas and the classic essay on inflation and fiat currency by Gertrude Stein, this film features some of the Bay Area’s most POSSESSED performance artists making “art” with a Picasso Blue Period “print,” an “original” African mask, loads of “fake” money and a REAL live wheelbarrow and fog machine with a chant that is sure to get the Occupy Wall Street folks IN THE ZONE. Their symbols only have power over us if we let them. INVERT THE PYRAMID. We have magic too.

How To Stop A Revolution

Kenji Tokawa
2011, Canada, video, color, sound, 11 min.

A relationship breaks down under the strain of different oppressions that keep us silent even in our most intimate spaces. Oppression works divide-and-conquer style through struggles with race and class.
LA ENTREVISTA (THE INTERVIEW)

XAMUEL BAÑALES
2010, USA, video, color, sound, Spanish with English subtitles, 10 min.

Inspired by the grand Spanish artist, operatic mezzo-soprano, and politician diva Manuela Trasobares. This satirical performance piece simulates an interview, highlighting race, gender, sexuality, class, and nationality as they relate to identity, social justice, and decolonization, Queer Xicano style. Produced by representatives of Young Queers United for Empowerment at UC Berkeley.

BUTCH TITS

JEN CROTHERS
2010, Canada, video, color, sound, 4 min.

Butch women discuss the sometimes complicated relationship they have with their breasts. And they show us their tits.

VAMOS A QUEMAR (LET’S BURN)

EL PARAMO COLECTIVO
2010, Spain, video, color, sound, English/Spanish w/English subtitles, 27 min.

In Barcelona, a crossroad of events: a performance where a woman penetrates another woman with her fist while holding a camera. A screen projects and reproduces everything in large dimensions. A book launch becomes a ceremony to celebrate the death of the phallus, ending in a fisting by a bonfire. Everything can be inscribed in the same collective search to challenge the representation of the body in order to create alternatives to gender and sex stereotypes. The Paramo Collective was born in Barcelona in 2010 during one of many afternoons of teamwork. The group united not around a concrete idea, but rather under the same visual needs: the search for out-of-scene images and the exploration of subjects, objects and contexts that do not fit within pre-established limits. PARAMO is currently focusing on the struggle led by the recently-formed Spanish Transfeminist Movement.

DON’T ASK DON’T TELL GAY GAY GAY

DAYNA MCLEOD
2011, Canada, video, color, sound, 2 min.

Danya McLeod watches TV so we don’t have to. Like the short description summaries that often accompany TV programs through an on-screen cable guide, Don’t Ask Don’t Tell Gay Gay Gay is a jump-cut/short-cut edit of Season 4, Episode 4 of Boston Legal. All excess material has been removed to effectively capture the tone of national discourse around DADT.

THE CULTURE WAR IS A DIVERSION FROM ECONOMIC POLICY INSURING PLUTOCRACY

CHARLES LUM
2011, USA, video, color, sound, 5 min.

A local NYC-Queer experimental documentary using art world critique to demonstrate the effective ambiguity of street protest and the continuing dynamism of “gay” in political strategies steeped in greed.

UNCOVERING COLOR

MARCELITTE FAILLA
2011, USA, video, color, sound, 10 min.

Through the poetry of a queer, mixed race woman, Uncovering Color looks at how skin color relates to racial identity. It interweaves interviews of Black women of different backgrounds to explore how perceptions of color impact childhood, beauty and family.

THE PROJECTIONIST

JERRY TARTAGLIA
2011, USA, Super8mm, 16mm, video, live performance, color, sound, 30 min.

The Projectionist uses Queer Film Action and multiple projections to explore the varieties of ways that projected images can help shape an understanding of our presence. From Aristophanes’ hymn to “Double Love” in Plato’s Symposium, to the implication of the audience in the viral political fears that plague America, Inc., The Projectionist attempts to unnerve, annoy and prod its viewers to the point of power in the present and turn away from the screens.

This presentation at MIX 24 includes Jerry Tartaglia, Eduard Dumitrache, John Schlegel & Abdul Alshagmom.
Every once in a while, MIX comes across a film that, although not “experimental” in process and format, brings to light a subject—or in this case a biography—that in itself qualifies as “experimental”. Passionate Politics: The Life and Work of Charlotte Bunch shares with all of us an extraordinary life lived so far. In many ways, Charlotte Bunch lived a social experiment to lead in the fight to create an America that accepts all as equal, devoid of racial, gender or sexuality-based violence and disparity. We, as part of the larger LGBTQ community, have been the benefactors of her courage, her spirit and her determination to reject the status quo of her generation. Her fight continues on a global level, and here at home, all the more necessary as GOP/Tea Party leaders and their female representatives share with others. Tami is a Professor at Hunter College.

TAMI GOLD

Filmmaker, Artist & Educator

Tami Gold is a visual artist who began working in media in the early 1970s in the Newsreel Film Collective of the anti-Vietnam War movement. In addition to painting, sculpture and writing, she is an award-winning documentary filmmaker. Among her many award winning documentary films are Juggling Gender (1992), a portrait of Jennifer Miller, a lesbian performer who lives her life with a full beard and Emily and Gitta (1996), a love story between two women, one, a daughter of Holocaust survivors and the other whose parents were Nazis.

Her work has screened at the Museum of Modern Art, the Whitney Museum, the Chicago Arts Institute, the Kennedy Center, and the American Film Institute among others. Tami is a Professor at Hunter College.

DAVID PAVLOSKY

Co-Producer

David is an NYC-based independent producer and director. His work covers a wide range of subjects, but themes of social justice and human relations are common among his films. Recent works include: Don’t Bring Scott, a documentary about the underlying desire for family and community told through the voice of the filmmaker and Puzzles, which explores the hatchet-and-gun attack on patrons of a gay bar in New Bedford, Massachusetts. He studied with Martin Scorsese and Abbas Kiarostami in the Tribeca Filmaker Exchange Program in Marrakech, where he completed the documentary short film Crossroads, which screened at the 2006 Tribeca Film Festival.

THE STANDBY PROGRAM

Passionate Politics: The Life & Work of Charlotte Bunch, was recently completed with support from the Standby Program.

Standby is dedicated to fostering the creation and preservation of media artwork by democratizing access to post-production services. Standby is an innovative program that allows the arts community access to the resources of the private sector. The Program operates out of several top-rated media post-production studios located in New York City.

The Standby Program partners with other media organizations a few times each year to highlight work created and preserved through the program and to provide a forum to discuss media arts making and preservation issues. We are proud to partner with MIX NYC to bring you this screening of Passionate Politics.
“YOU CAN’T BUILD A POLITICAL MOVEMENT OUT OF EXCLUSIONARY POLITICS, I’M A POLITICAL ORGANIZER. I WASN’T REALLY INTERESTED IN JUST HAVING MY OWN LIFE AS A SEPARATIST. I WANTED TO CHANGE THE WORLD… I ALWAYS WANTED TO CHANGE THE WORLD.”

—CHARLOTTE BUNCH
The ecstatic, the fantastic, the dark and the strange converge in Fantastic Magick for a new edition of homoerotic love spells, witches and devilish art. Here you will find tricksters conjuring spirits of the past as well as blazing trails for all that is to come through sex, inversion, the occult, and other forms of ritual behavior. In Sorcières, Mes Soeurs, we find women living in defiance of social expectations. And in WHOEVER WHATEVER, we find a more obscure yet equally magical take on a defiant woman. In Aquarius, a love spell is cast, where in The Magus and Jerk the Circle, we observe rituals with more obscure ends. From the directly subversive to the obscurely strange, queer magic and ritual infuse the screen with delight. This program delves into the roots of its own creation only to tear asunder your assumptions from the start. CURATED BY THE FESTIVAL PROGRAMMING COMMITTEE. TOTAL RUNNING TIME: 72 MIN.

LITTLE WHITE CLOUD THAT CRIED

GUY MADDOX

2009, Canada/Germany, video, color, sound, 4 min.

Goddesses unleash the power of the sea to channel forces beyond their bedrooms. Moving image and still photos create anorgiastic collage set ablaze in this musical short, created as an homage to underground filmmaker Jack Smith.

SORCIÈRES, MES SŒURS (WITCHES, MY SISTERS)

CAMILLE DUCHELLIER

2010, France, video, color, sound, French with English subtitles, 30 min.

Sirens of the devil, hounds of hell. Who are these women who represent the danger of times? Feminists for sure, hidden sometimes, but original in their approach to life. Here, Ducellier documents some of the witches she has encountered over time.

THE MAGUS

JAIMZ ASMUNDSON

2011, Canada, video, color, sound, 12 min.

A multi-format, process-based experimental film that explores the root of artistic creation. The film documents visual artist C. Graham Asmundson’s body of work over a rigorous six-month period.

WHOEVER WHATEVER

DANIEL MCKERNAN

2010, USA, video, B&W, sound, 7 min.

A haunting and epic dramatic short film starring downtown New York City icon Sophia Lamar, touching on preconceived ideas of genders, sexual expectations and stereotype.
Jesus and Satan, the ultimate opposing and polarized Western deities, prepare for a showdown on battlefield Earth. But sometimes even the gods are in for a surprise. WHITE LICK is a raucous, heretical, and satirical puppet music video fantasy about the war between these two ancient adversaries and the American tragedies that ensue. Can the clashing cosmic titans be brought back into harmony for the good of all before it’s too late?

Both tender and hardcore, Aquarius follows a young man as he uses magick to manifest the love he desires.

Using a combination of power tools and sexual energy, the performers pay homage to our feminist and queer pioneers through tactics of inversion. Jerk the Circle documents a ritual in which a powerful symbol is dismantled, rendered impotent.
Screening in conjunction with the Museum of Arts and Design’s Francois Sagat: The New Leading Man series (see page 43), MIX NYC is proud to present selected scenes of Chris Ward’s porno opus Arabesque. As much as we’d like to screen the whole 3 hours of 17 men in varying states of hirsuteness—and we certainly encourage micro-marathon-screenings amongst yourselves all around the city—we’re focusing solely on the scenes where Francois is center stage, so that it’s all-Sagat, all the time. Also starring Hussein, Joey Milano, Joey Russo, and Manuel Torres.

“Arabesque emerges from the silent films of Rudolph Valentino, starting in black and white and quickly turning into a lush, colorful photoplay. We peer into the hustle and bustle of a marketplace where a dozen hot Arabian men, hairy, built, and beautiful, conduct the business of life—buying and selling goods, gossiping about the village . . . eyeing each other and perhaps wondering about unthinkable thoughts . . . Slowly the scene thins out as men go back to their houses, some carrying new guns from the arms merchant, others with carpets, some with food. Finally five remain—the hottest men of all, each thirsting for something more than the cool water of the market fountain . . .”

—Raging Stallion Studios

If you find your self flush and thirsty from the Turkish bath scene, feel free and retreat to the lounge, cool yourself with water, wander about and if the spirit leads you to our Sagat Shrine, lay out your wishes and desires and leave an offering . . . needless to say, NYC Condoms are available at the hospitality desk.
De Profundis is a three part, hand/alternative-processed experimental film based on Oscar Wilde’s prison letter De Profundis. This 65 minute film sets up a haunting investigation of queerness, masculinity, history and sexuality, buttressing images against a soundtrack composed of Wilde’s aphorisms, a voice and piano setting of Wilde’s prison letter, and multi-tracked interviews with a diverse group of contemporary gay men.

“The only way to get rid of a temptation is to yield to it.” —Oscar Wilde

If film no longer existed, De Profundis gives the impression that Lawrence Brose is certainly capable of reinventing it. Oddly enough, Brose would do so by stripping film down to visual components that are reassembled only as they are knitted to each other at their breaking points. Redacted.

But one must resist the impulse to talk only of how Brose—with controlled image manipulation and extremely experimental hand-processing techniques—has produced in De Profundis a film united by stress and diaphanous. De Profundis is more than an unconventional approach to filmmaking, though it would be a visual tour-de-force if it were only that. Taking its cue from Oscar Wilde, De Profundis holds up a mirror to gay sexuality and plumbs the tensions reflected there.

Meshing images culled from home movies, drag performances, Radical Faerie gatherings, and vintage gay erotica with a piano soundtrack scored from Wilde’s prison letter and a voice composition fashioned from the poet’s aphorisms, Brose makes film itself into the protagonist of his exploration. With images and sounds constantly decaying and shifting and contaminating each other, film becomes a metaphor of the transforming self that Wilde prized for corrupting a sense of sexual normalcy. De Profundis embraces Wilde-esque deviance and cautions that the desire for normalization prevalent among contemporary gays threatens to contain it.

Serenity in sophistication is a triumph—like the deviance of De Profundis, which, achieved in an age too terrified to be deviant, lies in the film’s unflinching honesty and terrifying beauty.

Bob Mizer’s earliest photographs appeared in 1942, in both color and black & white, but his career was catapulted into infamy in 1947 when he was convicted of the unlawful distribution of obscene material through the US mail. The material in question was a series of black and white photographs, taken by Mizer, of young bodybuilders wearing what were known as posing straps—a precursor to the G-string. He would serve a nine-month prison sentence at a work camp in Saugus, California for what now seems tame. At the time, however, the mere suggestion of male nudity was not only frowned upon, but also illegal.

In spite of societal expectations and pressure from law enforcement, Mizer would go on to build a veritable empire on his beefcake photographs and films. He established the influential studio, the Athletic Model Guild (AMG) in 1945 with one or more heretofore-identified partners, but by the time he published the first issue of Physique Pictorial he was operating the studio on his own. With assistance from his mother, Delia, and his brother, Joe, he would go on to photograph thousands of men, building a collection that includes nearly one million different images and thousands of films and videotapes.

Robert Henry Mizer was born in Hailey, Idaho on March 27, 1922 to Delia Mizer, a recently widowed mother. Five years later she would move, along with her two youngest sons, to a home in Los Angeles, where she took in boarders to support her family. The home at 1834 West 11th St. would become the centerpiece of the AMG compound—a small Hollywood-style studio that spanned four city lots. Here Mizer would build an internationally known photography business, producing images that focused on representations of American masculinity. In his fifty years as an artist, he photographed bodybuilders, US servicemen, male prostitutes, and his fair share of cultural figures, including Victor Mature, Alan Ladd, Susan Hayward, Arnold Schwarzenegger, Joe Dallesandro, and others.

He died of cardiac arrest at White Memorial Hospital in Los Angeles on May 12, 1992. During his fifty-year career, he influenced artists like David Hockney and Jack Pierson, and was instrumental in bringing the works of others, like Tom of Finland, to the public’s attention.

The work is currently represented by Exile gallery in Berlin, Germany, where the exhibition “The Private Bob Mizer,” curated by Billy Miller, debuted earlier this year, showcasing the artist’s never-before-seen pioneering color photography.

Mizer began making films in the 1950s and as times progressed, his films reflected changes in both the adult film market as well as the society at large. The sampling here is mainly culled from the 1960s and gives a small taste of his output during that period when laws and the adult market was evolving. Mizer’s films were originally produced and distributed to be viewed privately; then in the late 60s they were shown at theaters, and then later still, as the market changed and the videotape was introduced, his product was once again consumed in the viewer’s private domain. This program is not meant as a mini-retrospective but simply as a sample of a certain period of production.

—Billy Miller, guest curator, in conjunction with the Bob Mizer Foundation.
Total Running Time: 61 min.
BOOKING A HOOD
1958, USA, video, B&W, sound, 5 min.
The scene is a police station and two young officers bring in a bad boy for booking. Everything goes according to plan, until the tables are turned and the criminal element gets the upper hand.

NARCISUS
1966, USA, video, B&W, sound, 2 min.
A muscular young man poses and admires his reflection in a mirrored pool.

GO GO GUYS (FEATURING STEVE & EDDIE)
1969, USA, video, color, sound, 11 min.
The film begins with a brief succession of go-going guys and then focuses on a glimpse into the dynamic between two young men who reveal that they are more than just casual acquaintances.

BOYS WILL BE GIRLS
1969, USA, video, color, sound, 1 min.
Underground drag artiste Gloria Holden (or “Glory Hole-don”, as she was sometimes known) attempts to briefly instruct a younger queen in the ways of a diva.

VIRGIN COWBOY [EXCERPT]
1971, USA, video, color, sound, 4 min.
An angelic blond young man joins first one and then a succession of other boys in an exploration of carnal pleasure.

NEVADA SMITH
1967, USA, video, color, sound, 4 min.
The young Mr. Smith demonstrates the correct way to handle a six-shooter and brings a flavor of the Old West to (then) contemporary times.

JEALOUS COWBOY
1968, USA, video, color, sound, 4 min.
An oddly Brooklyn-accented gunslinger lays down the law of the land to an unsuspecting tenderfoot.

RICHARD THAYER POSING
1967, USA, video, B&W, sound, 7 min.
A beautiful muscular boy goes through the paces of what it takes to be a successful Athletic Guild model.

TRICK OR TREAT
1962, USA, video, B&W, sound, 2 min.
A typical clean-cut, almost nude, athletic jock working out at home is interrupted by a knock on the door from a marauding trick-or-treater and proceeds to give the rude interloper the runs in return.

ONE HUNDRED AND ONE POSITIONS FOR CONSENTING MALES [EXCERPT]
1969, USA, video, color, sound, 7 min.
A virtual Kama Sutra of acrobatic sexual positions performed by a selection of comely lads.

THEATER INTERMISSION SHORTS [VARIOUS]
1968-70, USA, video, color, sound, 5 min.
A sample of short clips shot by Mizer that were originally shown at the Park Adult Movie Theater in Los Angeles in between feature films; introduced by A.M.G. models.

GROUP WRASSLE [EXCERPT]
1968, USA, video, B&W, sound, 2 min.
Physique Pictorial models exercising and wreslin’ en plein air at the Athletic Model Guild compound in Los Angeles.

VISIT TO A NUDE PLANET
1967, USA, video, color, sound, 7 min.
Directed by Dick Fontaine. Photographed by, and with sets designed by Bob Mizer. Gender illusionist Gloria Holden is assigned to investigate possible life on another planet (Uranus?) and sets out with her trusty bag of KY, personal hygiene products, and other hi-tech gear to boldly go where no queen has gone before.

A free collectible full-color Bob Mizer mini-zine will be available at the screening.
ROTE OHREN FETZEN DURCH ASCHE (FLAMING EARS)
A. HANS SCHEIRL, URSULA PÜRRE & DIETMAR SCHIEPEK
1991, Austria, 16mm, color, sound, German w/English subtitles, 84 min.

TV Guide.com calls it a “dismal miasma of butch posturing,” and “a festival of ugliness.”

MIX NYC calls it “fabulous” and “a beloved classic!” Let’s celebrate the 20th anniversary of this groundbreaking masterpiece of dyke filmmaking!

Collaborators shared acting, writing, filming and every other aspect of the production of this highly stylized, science fiction dystopian lesbian romance. Flaming Ears was shot in super-8 and blown up to 16mm. This process gives the film a grainy quality on top of its brightly colored costumes and sets, setting up the viewer to contemplate the landscape of a shabby but vivid low-budget future. The film is set in the year 2700, but we may learn more about the year 1991 by observing the contents of this time capsule of the queer imagination.

Keep an eye out for Spy drawing comics, Volley setting fires and Nun eating reptiles. Keep an eye out for stop-motion animation, clunky special effects and that infamous furniture sex scene. There is so much to look at, but don’t get too caught up looking for the plot line! With minimal dialog, spoken sometimes in metaphors, the images create their own iconography of a sexy but bleak future bursting with fetish attire and violence. Relying on tactile images more than words, we see fire, water, smoking, tea drinking, roller-skating and dancing. The film requires our careful attention and yet is simultaneously forgiving of our wandering minds as it conveys more a sensibility than a narrative. In the abandoned and desolate city of Asche, the world is inhabited almost entirely by lesbians. Hands get blown off, bombs get blown up and guns get fired. Nearly every detail of this film is cryptic, with symbolism and stylization going so far in the end as to transform one of the characters into a cardboard cutout. Let’s wear our dark cyberpunk best for this late night screening... And bring on the strange!

Ursula Purrer, director and actor:
“I am a woman. I make films. I know how to work with a ridiculous budget: you can call me a master of improvisation. I’m lesbian and I have a preference for experiments, I am a strategists, a utopist. I am Volley. As simple as that. And Volley loves precision, ease, aggression, devotion and wit. I live in a special world, and I walk through the so-called world heavily armed.”

A. Hans Scheirl, director and actor:
“They are female lone warriors, and they try to live their lives as intensely as possible and thus collide with each other somehow. It’s a matter of life and death. And love.”

UNTITLED. OR: THE PARADOX OF A QUEER DREAM

SINAN GOKNUR
2011, USA, video, color, 3 min. (loop)
This interactive video performance installation features a three-minute video loop in which nude bodies appear posturing, gyrating for seconds at a time, then fade away; a motion sensor allows participants to modify this landscape of dreams where the bodily layers are a phantasmagoric exploration of queer desire and imagination, illusion, visibility and impossibility.

TIERS ON MY PILLOW, GAIN IN MY HEART

BUZZ SLUTZKY
2011, USA, video & sculpture
Tiers on My Pillow, a tiered wedding cake, is cut open to reveal the interior of a dollhouse, as a moving image is played from its spinning bottom tier. The thickly-iced exterior of the cake can be licked by viewers, enacting a sense of group pleasure and decadence. Shrunken images and queer and trans doll figures contained in the interior of the cake use scale to play with alternative reality. Dolls are also piled into a large bed atop the cake, signifying the extendedness of “chosen families” in queer social structuring. By playing with the dollhouse, viewers can embody non-normative dollhouse characters and to measure playful imagination against socialized expectations of straight time. The traditional symbol of the wedding cake is used to reframe what “forever” can look like, an architectural structure meant to represent queer decadence and polyamorous social structures.

CLITORAL AMOEBA

BUZZ SLUTZKY
2011, USA, sculpture
Clitoral Amoeba is a sculpture of the artist’s discarded girls’ panties sewn together by the holes to render them unwearable. previously worn by the artist when Buzz identified as female, the underwear is repurposed to take shape as an amorphous creature of the sea, nucleus, or other biological realm.

THE RING (RELOADED)

PETER CRAMER & JACK WATERS
2011, video, color, sound
A visual/aural abstraction from a ten-year work-in-process combining performance, film, and video, The Ring (Reloaded) uses images from Cramer & Waters’ exploration of Wagner’s Ring cycle that were either never edited into the three stand-alone screening versions and/or functioned primarily as the B-roll subtext in the performative multimedia realizations. These images alter their figurative and narrative association as Wagnerian moments are stretched, contorted, and distorted beyond immediate recognition as romantic signifiers, while remaining aware of their intended origin as base elements.
TRANSAR IN CITYSCAPES

ADRIANA VARELLA & IFÉ NIKLAUS

2011, USA, video projection & sculpture, sound, min.

Transar in Cityscapes is a sculptural video installation based on a hexagonal acrylic structure hanging suspended from the ceiling. On each side of the hexagon, an image is projected from inside the structure, while sound circulates through the whole piece. The piece seeks to subvert specific architectures in urban landscapes through lesbian intercourse. The background is the building where we chose to have sex; the foreground, our bodies; the camera, a subjective gaze. Built up by and for the patriarchy, churches, museums, and government buildings are part of the architectures of the oppression and domination that we intend not only to transgress and transform, but also to dissolve and cancel.

KUCHAROWICZ!

To commemorate the passing of one of queer experimental cinema’s granduncles, and the revival of one of the queer world’s naughty grandnephews, we’ve decided to bring the family together in a cozy micro-screening. If your head has been stuck up your ass this year, kindly emerge for a spell and check out Wojnarowicz’s Fire in My Belly, the piece that was jettisoned from of the National Gallery of Art’s Hide/Seek exhibition, demonstrating how one small flash-controversy by the radically-wrongish-Right can change queer discourse and remind us of the freedoms flash-forgotten and flash-remembered. Please remain outside of your own ass long enough to enjoy an emblematic piece by the late George Kuchar (1942-2011), who helped define the American avant-garde.

SHRINE

WILL SIMMONS

2011, USA, video, color, paper collage

While the carnal desert winds brush your face with Arabesque in the main screening room, come to the Shrine to Francois Sagat and pay your respects to the ink-scaled spirit of the New Leading Man, as he manifests upon a blank human effigy that some call mannequins, that other vehicle for want. Be sure to leave an offering and you might receive an uncut, upwardly-curved boon.

BUCK AND BUCY
EXPERIMENTAL FILM ENTITY CA CA CA
2009. Canada, multi-projected video, B&W and color, sound, 180 min. (loop)

Buck & Bucy is an experimental science-fiction epic narrative constructed with experimental film practices to produce a ritualistic psychick experience. In the film, two couples, one black & one white, communicate through space & time, ritualistic sex & dna evolution to create the alchemical pandrogyne, moving humanity to its next stage of evolution, a world without tears. Divided into chapters based on writings from Frenchman Georges Bataille’s History of the Eye & Into the Blue. Buck & Bucy is an alchemical space odyssey, and an ode to the Aeon of Horus of Thelemic lore. Original soundtrack recording by Solar Skeletons, Tzii, Hathor Kyriharia & Orillia Opry. Additional soundtrack elements by Amon Duul II, Goliath & Pink Floyd.

CONSUMER ONANISM
LOUIE CHAVEZ & FRANK DINEYAZHE
2011, USA, video, color, 2 min.

Using text from company slogans and ad campaigns, Consumer Onanism takes their commands one step further and interprets them as literal masturbatory messages aimed at fueling and inciting self-exploration. A series of four thirty-second videos looped on an iPod touch, intercutting between masturbatory and company commands/ad campaigns that flash in three-second intervals.

MELANIE RAYDO
2011, USA, video & faux fur, color, sound, 57 min. (loop)

To be human is to be superior to animal, or is it? The videos, shown on loop within this installation, all seek to interrogate the line we draw between one and the other, the animal within us and the one we put on to change our experience of the world outside. From the reification of an oft-maligned subculture to spiritual meditations on new beginnings. Housepets: a cavern with all sides covered in fur, seeks to cradle, to envelop, to create a space of comfort safe from the harsh weather outside.

THE PROJECTIONIST
JERRY TARTAGLIA
NOV 15, 7:15PM & NOV 16, 8:30PM
2011, USA, Super8mm, 16mm, video, live performance, color, sound, 30 min.

The Projectionist uses Queer Film Action and multiple projections to explore the varieties of ways that projected images can help shape an understanding of our presence. From Aristophanes’ hymn to “Double Love” in Plato’s Symposium, to the implication of the audience in the viral political fears that plague America, Inc., The Projectionist attempts to unnerve, annoy and prod its viewers to the point of power in the present and turn away from the screens.

This presentation at MIX 24 includes Jerry Tartaglia, Eduard Dumitrache, John Schiegel & Abdul Alshagmom.

GLANDS 4.0
SKOTE
NOV 19, 7:15PM
2011, USA, video & live performance, 12 min.

Set to an original soundtrack, GLANDS 4.0 comprises two costumed humanoids gyrating awkwardly before a video projector in a darkened room. The 12-minute performance piece is a campy exploration of bodily “betrayal” (i.e., mechanisms of puberty, illness, aging) and how emotions, feelings and thoughts are embodied within these biological processes. The resulting dance is a way to deal with this discomfort and confusion, and demonstrates the value of play and their favorite emotion, laughter through tears.

PRESENTING...
E. HEARTE
NOV 17, 8:15PM
2011, Canada, 16mm, video, sound, 30 min.

Presenting... is an improvisational performance that involves digital audio, a live video feed and manipulated 16mm video loops, revealing images of sexual, medical and legal exploitation, juxtaposed with images of queer spaces, parades and protests, gay bars and drag shows, erotica and surgery. Prisms, mirrors and lenses distort the 16mm film images, sending them beyond the standard perimeter of the screen. The live video feed is run through a laptop, manipulated with Max/Msp/Jitter and projected alongside the film. The soundscape for this performance— which explores the relationship between... gender identity, presentation, and the body/self within the queer community—generates a fractured narrative by combining documentary style accounts, medical and legal journals, statistics, news clips and historical retellings, with wild sound from various locations related to the subject matter.

Audience members will be invited to insert themselves into the visual narrative by stepping into the live feed, presenting their queer bodies in their chosen manner. These bodies will be woven into the ongoing improvised narrative, providing the opportunity to actively participate, express and alter the presentation of our queer forms.

THE INSIDERS

CORAL SHORT
NOV 15, 10:30M & NOV 19, 11:30PM
2011, Canada, performance, running time variable.

Eight performers speak to intimacy, community, trust, and genderless beauty by inserting themselves into two pink spandex balls, ever-morphing beyond the human form into giant amoeba-like entities.

YES, YOU ARE OKAY

LACY DAVIS & FINN PAUL
NOV 18, 9:15PM
2011, USA, video & performance, sound, running time variable.

With appropriated video footage projected onto their naked bodies, they stand bare to the audience, asking for forgiveness, freeing themselves from the guilt of their past mistakes, from long held secrets. They ask the viewers to consider their own, and to use art to practice the honesty, forgiveness, and radical acceptance we could not experience in our day-to-day lives.
As early as 1894, the Edison company experimented with the marriage of sound & picture and in the fall of that year, the ‘Dickson Experimental Sound Film’ was made. The film shows a man, who may possibly be Dickson, playing violin before a phonograph horn as two men dance—an audacious and very queer inception indeed.

René Clair, film critic and avant-garde film director, wrote in May 1929 “It is too late for those who love the art of moving pictures to deplore the effects of this barbaric (the ‘talkie’) invasion. The talking film is not everything. There is also the sound film, on which the last hopes of the advocates of the silent film are pinned.”

Clair went on to break cinematic ground with his use of sound, utilizing this new technical component to increase his artistic freedom to explore, as he recognized the creative and non-realistic possibilities that sound offered.

Though we might think of film as an essentially visual experience, we really cannot afford to underestimate the importance of film sound.

This program of short films abandons traditional dialogue as a means of telling a story, relying on sound—in most cases music—to complement the visual aspect. Whether the picture was inspired by the music, or the score was inspired by the image: whether the soundtrack is employed solely to enhance the emotional import of the film, or subvert what your eyes see, all of these works use sound and image in concert to create the whole story. In the tradition of René Clair, these makers demonstrate the leverage sound and score bring to image. Just try to imagine any of these films without these scores.

NOISE

TRANS-SUBVERSIONS IN GLOBAL MEDIA NETWORKS

At the turn of the 21st century, information technologies have transformed institutions of power into decentralized networks that link the everyday to the structural, the local to the global. Recent media and communication technologies, including the internet, computer and cell phone, are creating new conglomerate links between public/private life, mass media, science, military, government and finance, across local, national, regional and transnational scales. With greater everyday access, these newer technologies also make independent, locally adapted, interactive uses possible.

From different regions and diasporas, NOISE brings together transgender/queer media insurrections in the globally networked information economy. These shorts focus on the gender and sexual deviants, queer kin, street youth, activists, independent artists, laborers, migrants, and cultural workers that occupy the informal edges of conglomerate information infrastructures. More onscreen, online stream than film, video, game, performance, television, photography, or music, each piece exploits the interactivity, mobility, and liveness of networked media, rather than preserving the discrete aesthetics of medium, form, and genre. Together, they reject the replacement of one normative set of icons, images, messages, and protocols with another. And they flood the cocoons of atomized life in the so-called Age of Information with noise.

ESSENCE DE FEMME
CHAMA LEKPLA
2011, Thailand, video, color, sound, Thai w/English subtitles, 16 min.
What would it look like if humanity had no gender? A kathoej noi (baby tranny) shows us how to cook international chicken curry (curry is slang for prostitute in Thai). People have sex with places, the locations they inhabit. A girly boy and a girly girl play snooker and then get dirty. These three scenarios propose new modes of sexuality and relationality.
On a stormy night, we catch glimpses of each other.

Archival footage of the October 6, 1976 massacre of pro-democracy student protestors in Bangkok is juxtaposed with a Siam Society visit to the Yellow Banana Leaf Ghosts tribe.

Images of Burmese migrant workers in Thailand are overlaid with Thai commentary about them. Subtitles are provided in an invented language.

“To show naked men is forbidden in Thailand, but the fact that we did show it on a big screen is a statement. It is my political expression. To just show it, without saying anything more, already means something. The authorities ban films for the silliest reasons, so here it is.”
Defying both genre and traditional form, this program showcases work that explores many facets of insatiable queer sexuality. Ranging from the suggestive to the explicit, filmmakers examine desire as it is expressed in a multitude of ways, including straight boys who see nothing wrong with posing for gay porn, conversations about desire with queer men of color, and the adventures of wet-thighed dykes. From the grotesquely sexual testimonial of Forbidden Cigarette to the implicit nature of the explicit in lesbian hand gestures, these shorts challenge the viewer to examine what turns them on and turns them out, all outside of any prescribed formula for eroticism. COMMUNITY ACTION CENTER
A.L. STEINER & A.K. BURNS
2010, USA, video, color, sound, 69 min.

Community Action Center is an ambitious work that sets out to meet the urgent need for sexy, explicit lesbian pornography! Created by and about lesbian collaboration, Community Action Center flows over a series of very loosely connected scenes showing variety of dykes fucking each others' brains out. The film represents a huge undertaking, important not only for its feminist sensibility and explicit images but also for bringing up concepts of community as they intersect with sexuality. Deliberately assembled with friends as willing participants, Community Action Center situates itself in the real world but nonetheless imagines this world as consisting of one sexual encounter after another. Piecing together texts and influences, Community Action Center references both well-known and obscure images and ideas, including queer favorites like Jack Smith and Carolee Schneeman. Celebrating and subverting images typical in pornography and pop culture erotica, this tour of lesbian sexuality includes everything from the archetypical witch, to fruit, honey and an egg. Straight porn images are literally delivered by the pizza boy and subversively sent to the car wash.

Since September 2010, Steiner & Burns have taken the show on the road to be seen by new friends and collaborators. Dykes have a history of building connections through sharing content that challenges us, recalling the way Barbara Hammer toured her early work in women's coffee houses and stirred up trouble with explicit images of bodies and sexual pleasure. Community Action Center is well situated in the tradition of lesbian art that raises questions about women's complicated relationship with pornography and erotica. After touching down briefly in NYC, the journey continues in creating a constellation of screenings around the world.

And how does sexuality express itself and get represented outside traditional monogamous pairs? Can we create community through sexual expression and connection? Community Action Center is here with both its complicated content and the simple fact of its presentation to fuel the fire of our ongoing conversations about communing sexually through bonds of friendship... and the bonds of piercings, spankings and dildos.

FROM THE DIRECTORS:
"Because the video contains sexually explicit content, the term 'porn' is relevant and the artists have an interest in exploring the trap-pings of the term itself. Sex, sexuality and the complexities of gendered bodies are inherently political. Queer sex and feminist agency is a shared acknowledgment of reciprocal penetration. This project is a small archive of an intergenerational community built on collaboration, friendship, sex and art. The work attempts to explore a consideration of feminist fashion, sexual aesthetics and an expansive view of what is defined as 'sex'. Burns and Steiner worked with artists and performers who created infinitely complex gender and performance roles that are both real and fantastical, set to a soundtrack of music and original compositions by artists culled from the worldwide sisterhood. The video seeks to expose and reformulate paradigms that are typical of porn typologies, intentionally exploiting tropes for their comical value, critical consideration and historical homage. Using the gallery to exer/exorcise the mystical and discreet lost spaces of homosocial configuration, the artists have created a reason and a space to reflect on the cultural realness of homo-grown lesbian sexuality. The work aims to be a hedonistic and distinctly political adventure."

Screening with:
FEMALE FIST
KAJA DAHLBERG
2006, Sweden, video, color, sound, 20 min.

The video is an interview with an activist from the Copenhagen queer milleu, filmed with the lens-cap left on the camera. The interviewee begins by talking about pornography and about the creation of separatist rooms. About halfway into the film she goes on to speak, in more general terms, about the possibilities for being different in today's society. The film opens and concludes with a long silent scene from a big public square in Copenhagen. An excellent pairing for contemplation of the challenges of representing queer women's bodies and sexuality!

SAYE SKYE
SAYE SKYE
2011, Iran, music/spoken word performance, 15 minutes.
Saye Sky, an Iranian rap artist, will perform two songs dealing with social issues pertaining to the Middle Eastern world yet current to everyone.
In Pablo Oliverio’s Buenos Aires, humans and aliens live together in a totalitarian society. Books and other publications are outlawed. Constant surveillance and state control rule this bleak future. The relationship between humans and aliens has broken down, and both are subject to the enslaving powers of consumption and technology. Some humans with jobs are permitted to remain in the city, but aliens and poor humans alike are exiled by the city’s Department of Cleaning.

Cartographer Rex makes his way through the blighted city, witnessing skirmishes, burning books and lo-fi laser beams fired at protesters. By the light of flashing neon signs, Rex is watched by and interacts with robot representatives of the state. He dons a helmet and enters an altered state to draw beautiful maps with brush and ink. When his girlfriend leaves and he loses his job, Rex struggles between holding on to some form of employment or joining the resistance. Things take a turn for the hopeful when a new and mysterious roommate named Ian moves in, bringing the possibility of love. Along the path to revolution, we find an underground outlaw with cardboard goggles, comic book and video game worlds that come to life, and a rebel rendezvous in a nightclub.

Efforts to liberate the city intermingle with efforts to liberate the body. In this particularly relevant vision of the future, the world is run by consumption, greed and constant surveillance. Hope is offered by the possibility of queer extraterrestrial love. A society based on control is disrupted by desire unbound!

From the ominous titles that introduce the setting to graffiti coming to life, the film is visually stunning and charmingly strange. With extremely low budget special effects, it simultaneously subverts and joins the ranks of the science fiction genre. A testament to independent spirit, Oliverio wrote, directed and self-financed Un Ovni Sobre Mi Cama, with a 2-person crew, 25 actors and a set made entirely of found objects. Reminiscent of the bureaucratic nightmare of Brazil, the social control of Alphaville, and the video game world of Tron, this captivatingly dark film speaks directly to contemporary struggles with employment, protest, and the revolutionary potential of love.
Few artists can be said to have had a greater influence on the history of experimental cinema, queer cinema, and performance art than Jack Smith (1932–1989). Smith was an antic performer who played to the cheap seats, flamboyantly and tragically overwrought in the manner of Theda Bara, Maria Montez, Gloria Swanson, and Dorothy Lamour. His style of camp blended Hollywood orientalism, burlesque, kitsch, polymorphous sexuality, and social satire. Caustically funny, politically trenchant, and defiantly intolerant of intolerance, he provoked police raids and censorial judges, and created a beautiful, haunting, poignantly outrageous, orgiastic body of work that transformed the artistic landscape of the New York underground—a culture also being shaped in profoundly radical ways by Andy Warhol, Tony Conrad, Ken Jacobs, Ron Rice, the Kuchar brothers, Jonas Mekas, the Velvet Underground, Charles Ludlam, and Susan Sontag—as well as inspiring a subsequent generation of artists, including Richard Foreman, Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Christophe Schlingensief, Laurie Anderson, Derek Jarman, Nan Goldin, Robert Wilson, Jack Goldstein, Mike Kelley, Pipilotti Rist, Vaginal Davis, Cindy Sherman, Guy Maddin, Ryan Trecartin, and others.

Jack Smith

The genius of Normal Love lies in the film’s “normalcy.” In Smith’s world, only those things that are not faked are fraud, and cannot therefore be trusted. The women are women whether or not they are men, and when a real breast is exposed, rather than clarify the gender of the performer, one begins to distrust it for its authenticity. Smith drops the artificial noses employed in Creatures for a far greater degree of falseness. Mario Montez plays the mermaid, whose fin the viewer all too quickly takes for granted, and when, during a muddy embrace with the werewolf, her wig is accidentally removed from her head, the hair beneath becomes the lie we desire to be covered over with the truth, the platinum wig. A real pregnant belly swells to the point of obscenity, whereas the pink drag of the Pink Fairie/Cake Girl ring more sincere or “normal.” When the Uncle gets a pie in the face and his fangs fall out, the narrative(chase) is paused for the real moment which finds him uncovering his face, replacing his fangs. The watermelon feast is the campy and decadent equivalent to the feast of horror in Romero’s Night of the Living Dead. Here, of course, the flesh is the pink juicy casualness of the watermelon.

This is a bizarre world of Mummies and Werewolves, of Cake ladies and Mermaids, but this idea of normalizing the abnormal is eventually what makes it work, and it does quite well. Smith maps a world whose oddities are far more traditional than anything we know as traditional. This is what made him such an essential contribution to the world of experimental cinema.

Man at Bath

A documentary.

François Sagat will introduce the film and take its title from Gustave Caillebotte’s painting of a naked man seen from below.

Expanding upon this example of the male gaze, Sagat personifies the post-sexual liberation attitudes, along with European male characterizations, and processes in tackling each role. ‘Another Man: A Master Class with François Sagat’ reveals the method behind the man. Limited space available.

For the project, other they’re no longer in love. An honest examination of desire, relationships, and the struggle of being a male Hollywood star. Sagat represents a once considered unacceptable, now incomprehensible. In doing so, Sagat personifies the post-sexual liberation attitudes, along with European male characterizations, and processes in tackling each role. ‘Another Man: A Master Class with François Sagat’ reveals the method behind the man. Limited space available.

This film traces the final days of a troubled relationship. Split between Gennevilliers and New York, the film documents the end of a relation and a backstory of love and processes in tackling each role. ‘Another Man: A Master Class with François Sagat’ reveals the method behind the man. Limited space available.

The New Leading Man is presented through a partnership with the Museum of Fine Arts and the Columbus Circle venue.

Tickets: $10 general admission, $7 members.

FRANÇOIS SAGAT: THE NEW LEADING MAN

With a trademark tattooed scalp and Adonis physique, François Sagat has sculpted himself into a persona that, as filmmaker Christophe Honoré proclaimed, “redefines the notion of masculinity.” Chosen by designer Bernard Wilhelm to model his first ever collection during Paris Fashion week, the French born Sagat, a well-known star in the queer film industry, has now gained prominence as an actor in mainstream cinema. Breaking past stereotypes, Sagat represents a new type of leading man that, up until recent times, would have been incomprehensible.

Throughout Hollywood history, many film stars were closeted homosexuals, from Rock Hudson to Tab Hunter. What would have been once considered unacceptable, the openly gay Sagat has stepped out from what was up until recently taboo. In doing so, Sagat personifies the post-sexual liberation attitudes, along with Latino-American, Arab, and European male characterizations, and the tension between masculine and feminine. In short, Sagat’s foray as a male actor in French cinema directly challenges the traditional role of the male—a new model for a leading man.

HOMME AU BAIN (MAN AT BATH)

Christophe Honoré
2010, France, video, color, sound, 75 min.

Originally conceived as a short, Man at Bath is part of a project sponsored by the Théâtre de Gennevilliers and commissioned by fellow director Olivier Assayas, with François Sagat, Chiara Mastroianni, and Dennis Cooper. For the project, directors were asked to make films set in the Paris suburb of Gennevilliers.

Taking inspiration from the French Impressionist painter Gustave Callebotte, a former Gennervilliers resident, Man at Bath takes its title from Callebotte’s painting of a naked man seen from behind, drying himself with a towel.

Expanding upon this example of the male gaze, the film traces the final days of a troubled relationship. Split between Gennevilliers and New York, “Man at Bath” follows the filmmaker Omar (Omar Ben Sælem) and the hustler Emmanuel (François Sagat) as they go to great lengths to prove to each other they’re no longer in love. An honest examination of desire, relationships, and the struggle therein Man at Bath is a brave look at alternative models of love and life.

François Sagat will introduce the film and participate in a post-screening Q&A.

LA ZOMBIE

Bruce LaBruce
2010, USA/Germany, color, video, sound, 103 min.

Controversial director Bruce LaBruce’s second foray into the zombie genre, LA Zombie, would be the film that transitioned Sagat into the international film festival spotlight. Following the rampage of a homeless man in Los Angeles, who either has been turned into a zombie by aliens or believes himself to be one, LA Zombie examines the use of both gore and sex in genre filmmaking. Included in competition at the Locarno International Film Festival in Switzerland and at the Toronto Film Festival and featuring François Sagat, Socco Giovanni, and Wolf Hudson, LA Zombie continues to break new ground in genre cinema.

This film contains adult content and themes. No one under the age of 18 admitted.

François Sagat will introduce the film and participate in a post-screening Q&A.

Bath of Dionysus
George Kuchar was a man of many careers. He began making 8mm films at the age of twelve, collaborations with his twin brother, Mike, on a camera gifted from their parents. These early works are sensational remakes of the movies that played in their local Bronx theaters. Even in their adolescence, the twins showed an alarming understanding of cinematic conventions, with special respect paid to woman’s pictures (George’s fave) and swords and sandals epics (Mike’s). Fusing toilet humor with wrenching pathos, these early films were profoundly camp and made a huge impact on a young John Waters. “The Kuchar brothers,” Waters would later explain in the introduction to George and Mike’s illustrated memoirs, “Reflections in a Cinematic Cesspool,” “gave me the self confidence to believe in my own tawdry vision.” Throughout his early career, George worked by day in commercial arts, an industry he described as “that Midtown Manhattan world of angst and ulcers.”

By the mid-sixties, however, the Kuchars were discovered by the burgeoning Underground Film movement and heralded by Jonas Mekas in his Village Voice column and in the magazine Film Culture. In the latter publication, George’s writings appeared alongside prominent figures like Andrew Sarris, Jack Smith and Gregory Markopoulos. After accepting an invitation to teach a summer course at San Francisco Art Institute in the early 1970s, George met Curt McDowell, a student-then-lover, who campaigned to secure a permanent faculty position for George, where he would teach for the remainder of his life. The duo collaborated on many films, including George’s “The Devil’s Cleavage” and McDowell’s experimental/horror/porno, “Thundercrack!,” where George also stars - opposite his character’s love interest, a gorilla.

George changed with the times, influencing a whole new generation when he embraced consumer grade video. He humorously described himself as “a traitor to his medium [film],” but George galvanized the video form with his signature gusto, yielding dozens of video diaries (most renowned were “The Weather Diaries,” in which George documented seasonal – as well as emotional – storms in Oklahoma). Also a skilled visual artist, George worked alongside leading graphic artists like Art Spiegelman and Bill Griffith, exhibiting internationally. Recent venues included [2nd floor projects] in San Francisco, Mulherin + Pollard in New York and ADA Gallery in Virginia.

George inspired four decades of SFAI graduates, who played cast and crew to a yearly creature feature course, making movies like “The Fury of Frau Frankenstein” and “Jewel of Jeopardy.” George was cherished, by his SFAI students and international audiences alike, for his wild humor, exuberant spirit and intuitive production ethic. If something didn’t work in a “picture” (as George referred to all his works), he merely changed the story to suit the circumstance. This approach led to his magnum opus, “Hold Me While I’m Naked,” 1966 an early solo venture which became a film about isolation and filmmaking when regular actress Donna Kerriness abandoned the project. The result was named one of the 100 best films of the 20th Century by the Village Voice. Truly one of the most visionary artists of his time, George’s impact on six decades of film, visual art and popular culture is immeasurable.

"Using my sexual energy as a tool to fight the state is as good a tool as any other.
